LESTER MANGUN SUES NEW LENOX SCHOOL TRUSTEES FOR LABOR BILL

Sometime ago Lester Mangun of New Lenox rented and installed a motor in the New Lenox school.

When he presented his bill for $20 for rental of motor and $12 for labor in connection with installation, the school authorities offered to pay the rental charge but refused to pay the labor bill, claiming it had been paid. Mr. Mangun refused to accept payment for the rental charge only and brought suit against the school trustees Louis Eberhardt, George Morris and Bert Gillette in the court of Justice R. Melvin Whitaker in New Lenox. After hearing all the evidence and the school trustee not being able to show receipted bill for the labor charge, Justice Whitaker found in favor of Mr. Mangun and awarded him a judgment for the amount of his total claim of $32. The suit made a net court cost bill of $19.50.

Motorists were asked today not to confuse the Federal Use Tax on motor vehicles with the Illinois Motor Vehicle License fees.

Motorists who buy the Federal Auto Tax Stamps at post offices are given a card with the stamp. The card is to be filled in and mailed to the Collector of Internal Revenue.

But many motorists, Sec. of State Edw. J. Hughes said, are enclosing these cards with their application for Illinois 1942 auto license plates. Hughes said his office is returning these cards, which the taxpayer must fill out and mail to the federal official, and not the secretary of state, if he is to be credited with payment of the federal tax.

Care of Tires Becomes Vital With Rationing

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Before tire rationing became an actuality, motorists and car owners in the United States considered a tire as just another commodity purchasable when ever needed. Then few motorists gave any reasonable amount of thought to ways and means of lengthening the life of their tires.

There are a good number of motorists who are well acquainted with the story making the rounds concerning a test-car driver who was asked how he would wear out a brand-new set of tires in three days. Those motorists, more than likely, after hearing that story began to check up on themselves to see if they were guilty of such actions suggested by the test-driver in that story, the idea of which is repeated here.

'Successful' Tire Wear.

The "successful" ways to wear out tires, according to that veteran driver, are: "Underinflate each tire about 20 per cent. Drive in hilly country where the roads are twisty and the grades steep. Select a pavement having a 'sandpaper' top. Choose hot, dry weather. Take curves so fast the tires slide and squeal loudly, run mostly on the road shoulders. Spin the wheels when starting, open 'er up to 70 or better when you can, and always make screaming, sudden stops."

But today motorists aren't out for such an experimental lark. They are intelligently doing the following things test-car research has proved about tires and their proper care:

They are keeping careful check on the inflation of their tires. For it has been found that underinflation increases tread wear, causes walls and cords to break down, and increases susceptibility to pinch-damage. Overinflation concentrates wear in the tread center, makes wheels bounce, spin, and skid, and promote bruises and hard riding. If a tire is run flat it might be ruined in but a few seconds.

Before and After.

Then, they now realize, there is the matter of pinching, bruising, and overloading. Such is often hooked up with improper inflation. Pinching usually is caused by striking objects which fold a tire wall against the rim often breaking or loosening cords. Bruising comes from striking stones, chuck holes, or curbing. Overloading magnifies the effect of such thoughtless abuses.

Good Tires Only Recapped.

And at this point motorists should understand it will be only the good tire that the government, through army specialists, will permit to be recapped. Not just any tire is going to be recapped. For there is a definite time and condition of the life of a tire beyond which it is uneconomical to recap. Trying to get wear out of the last few thousand miles puts a tire in the class where recapping for economically suitable use is doubtful.

Besides the above points which motorists are paying strict attention to, here are some more suggestions, as read in Popular Science Monthly, that are helpful in adding miles, and perhaps years, to tires.

Prevent wheel misalignment which scrubs rubber from treads. Similar damage comes from improper front-wheel camber and caster, bent axles, loose bearings, wheel wobble, unequal brakes, and out-of-round drums. Likewise proper balance of the wheel and the shifting of tires, with the spare included in the shifting, further decreases rubber wear.

And a Few 'Don't's'.

A few "don'ts" for motorists interested in longer tire life are: Don't speed in hot weather. Don't let the brakes become inequaled. Don't wheel-spin the car off to a jumping start—especially in gravel and cin-

Fighter Planes Offer Best Defense In Protection From Bombing Attacks

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Pictured is the fastest fighter plane in the world, the Republic Thunderbolt, the P-47, which has attained a diving speed of 680 miles per hour and in level flight a speed of more than 400 miles per hour. According to the Office for Emergency Management, the Thunderbolt is soon to be placed in massed production. The plane has a 2,000 horse power engine, a four-bladed propeller and is 32 feet long. It has a wing spread of 41 feet. Fire power of the plane was not disclosed, but O.E.M. said it is "heavily armored and bristling with both large and small caliber guns."

How effective are anti-aircraft guns? How can they hit a target like a speedy elusive plane? Isn't it difficult to fire heavy projectiles several miles up into the air against the strong pull of gravity?

These questions are arising in the minds of many Americans, now that coastal cities of the United States are preparing for air raids, and guns are being set up to guard against them.

Actually, British experience in this war has shown that the chief value of anti-aircraft guns is not in bringing down enemy bombers, but in keeping them high and spoiling their aim, says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"If a bombing plane is to score a hit on its objective on the ground far below, it must fly in a straight line in the direction of the target for a few minutes to give the bombardier a chance to set his bomb sight accurately. It is during this period that a bomber is vulnerable to anti-aircraft fire, for then the pilot cannot dodge or follow a zigzag course.

Anti-aircraft gunners worry less about overcoming the pull of gravity than about getting their shells up fast enough to explode near or hit their rapidly moving target. Anti-aircraft shells contain a powerful charge of powder, designed primarily to launch the projectile on its upward path with the greatest possible speed.

Bomber pilots have learned in this war to watch for the flash of anti-aircraft guns firing at them from below, according to British officers who have been interviewed in this country. When they see the flash, they know that it will take several seconds for the shell to reach their level and explode. In this brief period of grace they try to dodge, if possible. Hence the importance of making shells travel upward at the greatest possible speed.

Fighter planes are the best defense against enemy bombers, the British have found. During the heavy air attacks on England in 1940, British fighters shot down nearly 10 times as many German bombers as did anti-aircraft guns. Heavy guns of about three-inch bore and upwards are used against high-flying bombers.

Machine gun fire also is effective against dive bombers if the gunner can restrain his eagerness until the plane is at very close range, British officers report. During the evacuation of the British army from Dunkerque some German dive bombers even were brought down by concentrated rifle fire.

One incidental use for heavy anti-aircraft guns is to show friendly fighter planes the location of enemy bombers. It is often difficult for fliers in the air to spot other planes. Gunners on the ground in England sometimes fire a few bursts of shrapnel in the direction of an enemy bomber formation to point out its location to British fighters that are in the air, then leave the battle to the airman.

Anti-aircraft shells are set to explode at any desired height before they are loaded in the gun. The height, and other factors that enter into calculation of the range are determined by secret and highly complicated apparatus. When a shell bursts, fragments of shrapnel are sent flying in all directions over a considerable area.

Air War Losing Prestige to Old Fashioned Ground Attack... War Economy Will 'Bite' Deeply...
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—This war, Roosevelt and Churchill are agreed, will not be won by a blockade, and it will not be won by bombing.

This last was a hard decision to make. Both men had hoped so strongly that when anti-Hitler air power reached sufficient superiority over the Nazis, the Germans could be bombed into submission. Perhaps the failure of Hitler to bomb the British into submission should have convinced them earlier. But they were counting on something else. They were counting on the thought that the German morale was not as tough a fiber as the British. They recalled that it was a collapse of German morale which ended the last war, not the victories won by the Allies in the field or on the sea.

But there has entered another factor, which a year ago was not considered important. This is anti-aircraft defense. It is perfectly true, as was figured a year ago, that no amount of anti-aircraft defense can prevent bombing. But the battle of Moscow has proved definitely that if the anti-aircraft is good enough, the bombers can be forced to fly so high that, bombsights or no bombsights, they cannot hit specific objectives, particularly if the objectives are small enough.

Anti-Aircraft Defenses

Another point down the same alley is that the anti-aircraft defenses of Berlin have made it very expensive indeed for the British to bomb that city. Just at present it happens we are in one of those phases of every military cycle. First, a new offensive weapon is improved or perfected, and for some time after that the offensive has the advantage. Then some defensive measure is conjured up, and the advantage goes the other way.

The Germans won their smashing victories in France and Belgium and Holland when the panzer strategy was new. It did not work so well after the Russians had studied it for more than a year and worked out a defense. The same thing has been true of bombing. An aviation officer in the U. S. army, discussing the proposed bombing of objectives in Japan, said it would be surprising if the Japs have not learned something—first, from the fact that Berlin was making it difficult for British bombers, and later from the brilliant air defense of Moscow.

It is really this development, taken together with the supreme necessity of not weakening the Soviet front against Hitler, which brought President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to see the logic of Stalin's not attacking Japan yet.

But by the same token all this spells a huge A.E.F., sooner or later, BEFORE we can have peace.

Headache Coming After the War

The war will not end until we have reached the highest possible tide of war economy, and touched the very bottom of peace-time economy. This spells a headache for AFTER the war. It is generally realized in the government, and plans are accordingly being made to take care of this peace-time problem.

Here and there are optimists who insist that we are bound to have a period of prosperity right after the final armistice. They base their theory on the pattern followed after the last war, when it was not until 1920 that economic difficulty appeared.

It is a theory easy to understand. When several years have passed with good earnings for everyone willing and able to work, and with all the people deprived of a number of things they would like to have for the simple reason that they cannot buy them, it is obvious that there will be tremendous piled-up demand.

Perhaps the best illustration will be automobiles and auto supplies. By the end of two years more of war, to say nothing of five, there will be millions of people in this country who want new automobiles, and who have the money to pay for them. These will be people who have been employed at good wages all through the war, but who have not been able to spend all their money. There will be another large group who have had their old autos in storage because they could not get tires for them.

So there will be a magnificent market for autos and supplies which will take a year or two after the auto factories have been turned back from wartime to peacetime production before these wants can be satisfied.

The same is true, though the totals probably will amount to less dollars, and hence less days' work, in many other lines—electric and gas refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, new utensils, tools, all sorts of things running into hundreds if not thousands of categories.

Gay Parties With G-Men Cause Stir In Department

Pretty Girl Foreign Agent Responsible for U. S. Embassy Scandal.

WASHINGTON.—G-men of the Federal Bureau of Investigation are working energetically to erase from their shield the smear left by a mysterious girl, known under several different names in New York, Chicago, Detroit and Minneapolis, who was sentenced recently to a year and a day in federal prison.

She has called herself Lois Lockner, Paula Lockner, Carol Davis, Paula von Luckner, and claimed kinship with Count Felix von Luckner, the German sea raider of the old World war.

With a number of other pretty girls she was a frequent guest of agents of the FBI at their suite in the ultra-modern glass and brick Beaux-Arts apartments in midtown New York.

But Lois made the mistake of posing as a G-woman herself and, in the resultant scandal, a number of agents were dismissed, while others were hastily transferred to points far, far removed from the scene of their gay parties.

Perils of Beauty.

The revelations in this particular case called attention to the fact that G-men, and agents of the government generally—especially those in the diplomatic and consular service—are daily subject to perils from beauty as well as bullets.

Among several pretty Nazi agents who pleaded guilty in recent espionage trials in Brooklyn federal court, New York, was Lilly Barbara Carola Stein, erstwhile Viennese model.

Shortly after she was brought into the investigation, Ogden H. Hammond Jr., socialite diplomatic career man, and a son of a former United States ambassador to Spain, appealed to the district court here to enjoin the state department against dismissing him from service.

Later, Hammond presented an affidavit from Miss Stein, declaring their relations had been "purely platonic."

But Lilly Stein pleaded guilty, along with another pretty German agent—Miss Else Wuestenfeld—to indictments charging them with conspiracy to transmit United States defense secrets to Germany. And the district court decided it would let Hammond's dismissal from the state department stand.

Mysterious Kent Case.

Then there was the mysterious case of Tyler G. Kent, former attaché of the American embassy in London, who is serving a seven-year sentence in England as a German spy. Born in the United States, a son of the late Consul General A. H. P. Kent, he was convicted a year ago with Anna Wolkoff, a Russian-born Nazi spy, with whom he was infatuated, with stealing Anglo-American messages.

Kent, in charge of cipher codes at the embassy, was passing messages along to the seductive Miss Wolkoff who, in turn, was smuggling them to "Lord Haw-Haw," renegade Briton who broadcasts in English over the German radio. She also was sentenced to prison, getting a term of 10 years.

Forty-nine defendants were indicted in a sweeping prosecution of Nazi activities. Most of them pleaded guilty to minor offenses under the espionage act and 16 went on trial almost four months ago.

MOSKEE, WYO.—This little lumber camp whose name has always been misspelled is no longer on the map.

There's no longer a post office of Moskee—and few people.

Once a rip-roaring lumber camp, the lumbermen here now get mail three times a week delivered by carrier from Lead, S. D.

About 29 years ago, when the lumber industry was booming, it was decided to establish a post office here.

Herald Haas, now of Rapid City, S. D., was named postmaster for the nameless post office. "What'll we call it?" he asked a rugged rancher.

"It makes no difference," he replied.

That answer set Haas to thinking. "Then," answered Haas, who had spent a number of years in Mongolia, "we'll call it 'Moskee'—which in Chinese means 'it doesn't make a bit of difference.'"

Proves That He's He-Man, Trees Bear Before Girl

ABERDEEN, WASH.—On the way home from a movie with his girl, Jim Clark showed her what he-men are like. He treed and shot a 200-pound bear that had roamed the outskirts of the city. They sighted him near a river bank. Clark waved a flashlight and the bear took to a tree. Edith Olson rushed to Clark's home for a shotgun. One shot was enough to kill the bear and prove that Jim is indeed a "man."

A number of the most beautiful paintings of ocean-bed life have been produced by artists working in the water on the sea bottom, sometimes at a depth of 50 feet. Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Vast Training Program Protects War Industry

STATE COLLEGE, PA.—Although long-range industrial planning has already created a huge reservoir of skilled workmen for war industries, the federal government in co-operation with Penn State and 144 other engineering schools is training reserve personnel. Penn State is giving credit for Pittsburgh steel mills, a Scarsdale, Pa., distilling company and other factories.

Current U. S. Agriculture Picture

Above map indicates the current agricultural situation throughout the country as reported by the Department of Agriculture. Food production and consumer buying power are at record levels.

WASHINGTON.—Food production is at high record levels, buying power of consumers is the greatest ever, prices and income to farmers average the best in a decade or more, according to a current analysis of the bureau of agricultural economics, U. S. department of agriculture. This means, says the report, that producers and consumers of food are in unusually good economic position.

Government figures show that the income of industrial workers has increased considerably more than the increase in food prices during the last two years. Whereas total non-agricultural income is about 39 per cent larger than the 1935-39 average, retail food prices average only 10 per cent higher than at that time. Monthly earnings per employed factory worker are 40 per cent higher than in 1935-39, whereas farmers in recent months have been getting about 30 per cent higher prices for food than at that time. This means purchasing power is increased in the same proportion.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

W-N-U-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT EIGHT

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, convinced by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate of her grandfather, Garrett Waterson, has come to Honolulu to attempt getting the property. In an effort to find out something about the Wayne family, now in control of Alakoa, the island, she accepts a date to go sailing with Richard (Tonga Dick) Wayne. Against her wishes he takes her to Alakoa. Arriving there, they find James Wayne, Dick's uncle and manager of the property, very ill. During the night of their visit he is found dead, Dick and Karen leave for Honolulu the next day. On the way back Dick tells Karen he loves her, but they quarrel over disposing of her claim to the island. Later Dick meets John Colt and tells him he has news for him.

Now continue with the story.

"I imagine, Wayne," said John Colt smoothly, "that you are lying."

"Not particularly," John Colt drawled. "You have a lost case, Wayne."

"I'm going to kill your case," Dick said tonelessly. "No, I'm going to do worse to you than that—I'm going to give my brothers the means with which to kill your case. To do that will cost me a great deal, in some very obscure ways. It will, in fact, cost me more than my share of Alakoa is worth. That is why I offered to settle with you. For Miss Waterson's sake, but principally for my own, I'm sorry that you refused. But you're finished, Colt—through—washed up—done."

"I get what you mean," John Colt smiled.

"If you think a little further," Tonga Dick said, "you'll see even more clearly what I mean. Your case has one hole in it. Ask yourself what that hole is."

Karen Waterson, watching John Colt's face, saw a curious thing happen then. The faint, tired smile on Dick's face lingered there still, but after a moment Karen saw that it was only the form of it that remained. Dick's eyes were fixed hard on Tonga Dick, and Karen thought she had never seen anything like the intensity of that unflinching stare. If ever a man tried to look into another man's mind and take it apart, Dick was trying it now.

Dick Wayne was filling his pipe. The very fact that he was smoking a pipe at all at a tea dansant made him look more at ease thereby, as if he alone, of all the people on that broad lanai, was completely at home.

"You're thinking of exactly the same thing I am, John," Dick assured him softly.

Once more the eyes of the two men met and held.

"I imagine, Wayne," said John Colt smoothly, "that you are lying."

Steadily, unhurried, controlled—there was nothing in John Colt's voice to indicate that he knew what it was to doubt. Yet, somehow, Karen knew with utter certainty that Dick was shaken—more deeply shaken perhaps than he would have admitted even to himself; and when Karen saw that, she was oppressed by a gray conviction that John Colt, gambling for Alakoa, in her behalf, had irrevocably lost.

It was late in the evening when Dick dropped anchor in Alakoa's little bay, and immediately was driven up to the old house high in the gorges.

His brothers, as he might have expected, had already retired. It was surprising in how many superficial ways they imitated the virtues of James Wayne—without ever seeming to accomplish anything thereby. Dick did not cause them to be roused, at once. Instead he sent for Charles Wong, and with the assistance of the efficient Chinese set about a brief survey of the condition of Alakoa's books.

A careful audit would have been necessary in order to check through, with any accuracy, that great array of his uncle's books which recorded the financial transactions of Alakoa. Dick knew what he was looking for, however; he steamed rapidly through such of the summaries as interested him.

The story that those books told should have pleased anybody, but it did not please Dick Wayne. He was hunting for something else, the existence of which he only suspected, and to which he was perfectly certain his brothers had no clue at all.

When he had hunted a long time without result it became apparent to him that Charles Wong, under guise of assistance, was in subtle ways managing to confuse his search, and bring it to nothing. As this became definitely evident, Dick Wayne went back and searched again, and this time found what he sought. It was an inconspicuous item for the year 1930, easily brushed over, and obscure in meaning when found. It consisted of nothing more than an entry, under miscellaneous operating expense: "Old debts, $25,000."

The entry was posted where it did not belong—a practice untypical of either James Wayne or Charles Wong, and Dick turned sharply upon the Chinese.

"What debt was this?"

"What debt was this?"

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 4:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—For we have an high priest . . . (who) was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.—Hebrews 4:15.

"We have not a high priest that cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but one that hath been in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Heb. 4:15, R.V.). We recognize that Jesus was tempted as the Messiah (see Matt. 4:3, 6) and as One who had no sin, and yet He was tempted in all points as we are; and we may learn from His temptation how to meet temptation and be victorious over it.

I. Temptation.

It is the common lot of all mankind to be tempted (I Cor. 10:13). The strongest and most noble of men are subject to it; angels were tempted—yes, even Jesus was tempted. We need to know about temptation, so we note

1. What It Is (v. 1). Temptation is of the devil. It is, as Principal Fairbairn expressed it, "seduction to evil, solicitation to wrong. It stands distinguished from trial thus: trial tests, seeks to discover the man's moral qualities or character; but temptation persuades to evil, deludes that it may ruin. God tries. Satan tempts."

Note that temptation is not sin, but yielding to the temptation is sin.

We are told by James (Jas. 1:13-15) that man is tempted by his own lusts. He also tells us that God may permit temptations or trials to test our faith (Jas. 1:2, 3), but His purpose is only to prove us able to stand. God does not suffer us to be tempted beyond endurance, but provides a way of escape (I Cor. 10:13).

2. How It Works (vv. 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 9). Satan has only three temptations, although he is a master at giving them different appearances. The temptation of Jesus followed the same threefold line as that of Adam and Eve (Gen. 3:6), which is described in I John 2:16 as the general temptation of all men, namely, "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life." Observe how Satan worked on Jesus: (a) By appealing to the flesh (vv. 2, 3). Jesus had fasted 40 days, and Satan took advantage of that fast to suggest that He use His divine power of creation to satisfy His hunger. To do so would have been to deny His very mission on earth.

Satan observes in man the normal appetites of his body, excites them to a high degree, and then tempts him to satisfy them in an improper way. (b) By appealing to pride (vv. 5, 6). God had promised to keep Jesus "in all his ways" (Ps. 91:11), but casting Himself from the temple was not one of God's "ways" for Him.

The devil wants us to be presumptuous and call it faith, and this is his pitfall for one who really wants to believe—cause him to become a fanatic and substitute foolish presumption for faith. (c) By appealing to the eyes (vv. 8, 9). By showing Christ the kingdoms of the earth in some kind of striking panorama, or moving picture, he offered a short cut to their rule by a brief act of worship of him, rather than by way of the cross. The devil showed his real purpose here. He wants worship—he wants us to bow to him instead of to God.

II. Our Lord Was Victorious Over Satan.

We, too, can triumph in His blessed name. To do so we need to study the way of victory.

1. How to Gain It (vv. 4, 7, 10). Three steps appear: (a) By the right use of Scripture. If our Lord needed and used that weapon, how can we possibly do without it? How can we use it if we do not study it, and hide it in our hearts (Ps. 119:11)? (b) By complete dependence upon God. Every Scripture used by Jesus against Satan honored God the Father. We cannot fight Satan in our own strength. Luther was right—"Did we in our own strength confide, Our striving would be losing."

The real victory for the Christian is to bring Satan to the foot of the cross. Christ defeated him completely there, and we may plead that victory. (c) By denouncing Satan. Jesus sent him on his way. We may do the same, in Jesus' name. It is always a serious error to argue with Satan, or even to discuss matters with him. He is not divine, but he is a supernatural being with knowledge and cunning which are too much for us. Meet him with Scripture, honor God by your faith in Christ, then "resist the devil, and he will flee from you" (Jas. 4:7).

2. What It Brings (v. 11). When the defeated devil left Christ, angels came and ministered to Him. The overcoming of temptation brings victory, peace, and blessed rest. This is ever true in the life of the believer. Temptations victoriously met make one stronger in meeting the next temptation. There is always a next one, for we read (Luke 4:13) that the devil left Christ only "for a season."

A large number of Tinley Park women attended the Food Demonstration sponsored by the American Home Department of the Woman's club. The ladies learned some new ideas about baking, using left over meats and making some very lovely dishes for entertaining.

We also learned about a special bland lard that can be used for baking. Prizes were given to the lucky ladies whose names were drawn. The American Home chairman thanks all who attended and helped to make it a success.

The American Home Dept. met Wednesday with Mrs. Otto Jobson. Nutrition foods were discussed, also different economical dishes, and meat problems were discussed. Tea and cookies were served and the ladies departed with some new ideas and recipes.

The next meeting will be at Mrs. Jobson's February 11. There will be some new ideas about sewing.

All Women's club ladies are invited.

TINLEY Park School News
Plans are being made by the teachers and children of the Tinley Park Public school for a program to be presented to the general public the evening of February 20.

The program will be of a patriotic nature depicting the ideals of America. The theme will be victory. Various periods in the history of our country will be depicted emphasizing the difficulties and how they were overcome by the spirit of Americanism. The foundations of this spirit can be found during the Colonial period when the Pilgrims won the victory over the elements settled on our eastern shore and faced the hardships of a new world.

The Revolutionary War with the Signing of the Declaration of Independence another victory which was due to the spirit of the American and his desire to preserve the ideals of the new found nation. The victory of the war of 1812 and the writing of the Star Spangled Banner was again a victory for the ideals and rights of the American people.

In 1864 another conflict and another problem needed to be solved. The ideals of freedom and the belief that "All men are created equal" triumphed.

Later came the period of rapid expansion. The urbanizing movement and the development of new machines, new methods of production the development of our natural resources presented problems which took courage to solve.

Directly following this, society became important in our country and the 1890's were gay and colorful even through a depression and its problems which needed to be solved and a victory was the result of the American spirit to face a task and do the job of making this country free from depression. Catastrophe faced the American people again with the coming of the World War. Our freedoms were endangered by a potential world conquest. The American people sacrificed much in order to preserve this nation and the ideals founded by our Pilgrim fathers. The American Victory is known to all. However, other problems were to present themselves during the period of adjustment. Again the American spirit and the desire to preserve American ideals won a Victory and we hope a lasting peace.

Today we are faced with another conflict which threatens our love of peace. Treachery has brought us face to face with another problem and again the American spirit is driving us on to the greatest victory of all.

These periods will be presented by the children of the Tinley Park school with words and music in a colorful portrait of the American

ORLAND SCHOOL NEWS

Miss Mildred Doctor is helping part time in the office this month. Mr. John Betts had charge of Assembly Wednesday. He read some poems by well known poets, after which Shirley Braasch, Gordon Clevenger, Ruth and Virginia Gee, Bill Maddox, Muriel Morlock and arion Peters, all of English III class read some of their poems. The program was completed by Mr. Betts reading some of the poems he composed.

Mr. Rawland attended the Cook County school Principals meeting in Chicago Wednesday, January 13 and reports the schools are making many plans to cooperate with National defense. Bob Arnold has returned to school after recovering from his automobile accident.

There will be exemptions from writing semester exams. Those having a B average will not write them. Arthur Beagley visited a short while at school one mornin this week.

Marilyn Sayre has submitted several designs for the school crest contest. The cheerleaders at Yorkville had excellent teamwork. There was an absence of the usual "poultry and egg talk" cheers. They were the kind that encouraged the team and did not antagonize the opponents. They commanded the respect of all listeners, were distinct, well drilled and had pep. We hope to hear similar high class cheers at Orland soon.

The team showed appreciation to Yorkville for their victory by buying out a restaurant, taxing its capacity with hamburgers and pies. The basketball team discovered the treatment received by winners when Irvin Dorn was delivered to his back door after the game. Also by the score being in the Chicago Sunday Tribune. Orland's defense was by far the best of the year. Bill Munch made two excellent long shots in his now famous way. These helped very much to win the game.

In the Red Cross class, Mary Lou Callahan and Sally Green are knitting while the other girls are making baby clothes and bandages.

Friday night our teams play Beecher there and Saturday night we play Plainfield here. Plainfield is a basketball town and has the reputation of having a strong team. They have played close games with such strong teams as Wilmington, Oswego and Yorkville.

2 GOOD HABITS

QUICK PICK-UP—when your telephone rings. This helps prevent your missing calls from people who wouldn't wait.

2. SLOW HANG-UP—when calling. One more moment may bring an answer and save you the trouble of calling again.

• Small things? Perhaps—but by practicing these two good habits you will add much to the efficiency of your own telephone service and of service in general.

And that's vital today—when people in Illinois Bell territory are making about 16,000,000 more telephone calls each month than at this time last year.

"Quick pick-up" and "slow hang-up" make your own telephone more useful to you at any time; and right now they aid materially in keeping telephone circuits as clear as possible for our first job—winning the war.

Snack on a Frosty Night—Broiled Wienies
(See Recipes Below)

Wintry Snacks

The cold, frosty evenings with their full program of basketball games, sleigh ride parties, skating and other winter-time amusements call for piping hot, hearty snacks to take care of brisk appetites. While in warmer weather, the family could raid the ice box, now the problem is slightly different, as hot food, satisfying but still simple, is in demand.

Here's a dish that just seems to fit the bill: the broiled wienies and hot potato salad pictured above. Of course, hot potato salad with wienies is an old favorite but there's a touch of something new in the wienies broiled with cheese and the green beans around the potato salad to add a touch of color.

*Broiled Wienies.

Select two to three skinless frankfurters for each person to be served, two will do nicely for the girls and women but better count three for the men and boys. Split the frankfurter and insert a strip of American cheese. When almost ready to serve, pop into the broiler and cook until cheese melts and browns.

Hot Potato Salad.

(Serves 6)
6 potatoes, boiled with skins on
¼ cup finely chopped onion
2 hard-cooked eggs, diced
Salt and pepper
6 slices bacon, broiled until crisp, crumbled
Peel potatoes and cube. Add remaining ingredients. Just before ready to serve, mix with this hot dressing:

Cooked Salad Dressing.

3 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon yellow mustard
1½ tablespoons flour
1 egg yolk
¾ cup water
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon butter

Blend dry ingredients, then add egg yolk and blend until smooth. Add water, then vinegar, stirring constantly. Cook over boiling water, stirring all the while, until thick. Remove from fire, add butter and serve hot, mixed with potato salad.

Spaghetti is and has been for some time now one of the reigning favorites among hot dishes to serve in the evening. Here's one dish you'll like because it's both tart and satisfying, with plenty of cheese and sauce baked right into the long strips of spaghetti:

Baked Spaghetti.

(Serves 8)
1 pound package of spaghetti
3 small onions, chopped fine
2 tablespoons oil
1 pound ground beef
½ pound sausage (in the bulk)
½ pound mushrooms
½ teaspoon pickling spice
1 teaspoon salt
4 small cans tomato sauce
¾ pound grated American cheese
Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water 12 to 15 minutes. Drain and run cold water through it. Sauté onion, ground meat and sausage in oil until brown. Add mushrooms, spice, salt and tomato sauce. Simmer slowly for 40 minutes. Put thin layer of spaghetti on bottom of buttered casserole. Then add a layer of sauce, then cheese, another layer

Lynn Says:

Here are a few quick snack ideas you'll like to paste in your notebook: Baked beans garnished with brown bread, cream cheese sandwiches, placed around the bean pot. You might try the canned baked beans with sliced ham, too. It's quick, easy and delicious. Toasted buns with hamburgers, cheeseburgers, or ham and cheese slices go over nicely, too. Toasted English muffins with an egg fried or poached with ham are high in favor.

HITLER AND THE DOCTOR

"I'm feeling very funny,"
Said Adolf in disgust;
"You'd better fetch a doctor—
And get one I can trust!"

A doctor came arunning,
And cried, "You sick! Ah, me!
This news is most amazing—
I thought YOU couldn't be!"

"No small talk," barked Der Fuehrer,
"Just get to work, and quick!
I'm just as dazed as you are
To find I CAN be sick!"

"What seems to be the matter?"
The doctor did implore;
"You're asking me!" snapped
Adolf—
"That's what you're summoned for!"

"Stick out your tongue," the doctor
Requested (and we quote);
Der Fuehrer sadly did so . . .
And, boy, was that a COAT!

It plainly showed a fever,
And stomach all upset;
"It was that Russian dressing,
And other things he 'et.'"

It showed grave indigestion,
And bile disturbance, too;
It showed amazing symptoms
Of ailments far from few.

It showed clear indications
Of major gluttony—
Of ulcerous ambitions
And chronic treachery.

It showed some bladder trouble—
(No blight could that tongue hide);
"Your spleen's bad," said the doctor,
"Your trouble's deep inside!"

"Your arches they are falling,
Your kidneys aren't good . . .
I don't think you've been doing
Exactly as you should!"

Der Fuehrer's eyes were bulging—
His nerves seem torn apart,
And now the doctor whispered,
"I'll listen to your heart."

He listened and he listened,
He listened everywhere,
He listened most intently—
But heard no ticking there!

The doctor said: "Your heart, sir . . .
I hear no beat, alas!"
And Adolf answered, sneering,
"I have no heart, you ass!"

The doctor was befuddled,
He took another look
At Adolf's tongue deep coated
And wrote this for the book:

"His uniform this patient
Once said he'd never doff,
But one thing I can tell him—
THAT COAT HE MUST TAKE OFF!"

The Russians captured a carload of iron crosses marked "For presentation after the capture of Moscow" the other day. Maybe the Nazis would now like to mark the whole Russian campaign "Opened by mistake."

OF ALL THINGS!
"The speaker told the audience that America should develop a cheerful-sounding air raid warning. Victory chimes were suggested.—News item.

This seems eligible for the Baloney of the Year Award. Americans are complacent and cocky enough without trying to provide an air raid signal with an entertainment motif.

It is the most cockeyed suggestion so far made. Any minute now we await word from the man who has invented an air raid signal that will combine the music of Irving Berlin with the soothing qualities of another aspirin tablet. Not to mention the fellow who will come forward with an idea for tying up the signals with a system of radio crooning.

Employees of Yale university have joined the C.I.O. by a vote of 462 to 143, which must be quite a shock to conservatives under the elms. We can now understand why the Blues put so much more feeling, when they sing the Boola Boola song, into the line "Break through the Crimson line, its strength to defy."

This labor movement at our universities suggests interesting possibilities. Perhaps ultimately the whole jurisdictional issue will be settled by having the C.I.O. play the A.F. of L. in the Yale Bowl.

With your name done in candle lights,
And I'll wish you happy returns of the day,
But I'll worry about your nights.
